Celebrating our young authors

Stroberis and Peechs is our cherished annual publication, featuring the unfiltered and imaginative writings of our Class 2 graduates. These pieces offer us a glimpse into their creativity, and the joy of writing without fearing making mistakes. Each piece is presented in its original form without editing or correcting spelling and grammatical errors. Publishing these articles serves as a reminder to teachers and parents alike that “mistakes” are part of the learning process, and that making corrections at this stage often inhibits children from writing creatively.

As these young graduates step into the next chapter of their academic journey, we hope they will hold onto these memories with pride. We wish them all the best in their schooling experience ahead!

I am scared of spiders. I hate spiders because they are nasty specially Trintroula. They are black and hairy. They look cute but actually they are not. When I went to America in my holidays I saw a Trintroula climbing the wall. Every body screamed. I was amazed. It was different from the spiders I saw in Pakistan. The spiders in Pakistan are harmless. They are really small. They are black and grey. I am very fascinated about spiders because they can make strong webs.
